The palatial residence of Mr. M. A. Muldrow in Darlington County was all aglow with life and beauty on last Wednesday evening. Love was never lovelier than on this occasion, and everything conspired to make life as intoxicating and delicious as a maiden's dream. The spacious parlors were beautifully and gorgeously decorated with rare and choice flowers that were symbolical of the event about to be solemnized amidst a scene of enchanting loveliness. Promptly at half-past eight o'clock the two retty little flower girls, Misses. DuBoise and Gee appeared upon the scene exquisitely dressed in white, artistically embroidered with rose buds. Each had a basket of roses and their delightful duty of strewing the pathway with roses for the bridal party was most gracefully and daintily executed.

Everything was in readiness for the grand bridal march. Even the modest moon and cunning little stars whose images had all the while been reflected in the rippling waters of the beautiful lake near the front garden, now peeped in through the doors all agog with excitement and pleasure, in anticipation of what was soon to be seen. The effect was that of fairy-land. Such were the influences at play upon the imagination when the soft and came in the following order: Mr. W. A.
